2. What cookies are

Cookies are small text files that a website may save on your device through your browser. They help the website operate, remain secure, remember choices and understand how visitors use it. Similar technologies may also store or access information on your device.

3. Types of cookies we use

- Necessary and technical cookies support core website functions, security, form submission, session management and remembering your cookie choices.
- Functional cookies remember settings and preferences so that the website can respond to your choices.
- Analytics cookies help us understand visits, traffic sources, popular pages and website performance. Depending on the tools enabled on the website, analytics may include services from Google and Apollo.
- Marketing cookies help tailor advertising to interests and may be set by advertising partners. Information about activity on this and other websites may be used to infer interests.
- Social media cookies may be set by social media partners to support embedded features and tailor content or advertising.

Cookies may be session cookies, which are removed when you close your browser, or persistent cookies, which remain until they expire or you delete them. The period depends on the cookie and the provider; current provider and expiry information is available in the website’s cookie settings.

4. Information collected through cookies

Cookies and similar technologies may collect or access information such as your IP address, browser and device type, pages visited, actions taken on the website, time spent on a page, cookie preferences and the approximate location associated with your connection.

5. Managing and withdrawing consent

Necessary cookies are used to provide core website functions. Non-essential cookies are used only after you give consent where consent is required by law. You can change or withdraw your cookie choices at any time using the cookie settings on the website. You can also manage or block cookies in your browser settings.

If you block cookies, some website functions may not work correctly. The website should remain accessible, although its operation may be limited.

6. Personal data and privacy information

Information collected through cookies may constitute personal data. For details about how the controller processes personal data and your rights, please read the Privacy Policy: <https://expandtoeurope.pl/policy>.

7. Contact and complaints

For questions about cookies or personal data, contact office@expandtoeurope.pl. You may lodge a complaint with the President of the Personal Data Protection Office (UODO) in Poland. Information about UODO is available at <https://uodo.gov.pl/>.
